UM ART SHOW
FEATURES STUDENT
PHOTOS, PRINTS

MISSOULA---

Contemporary photo silk screen prints and photographs by University of Montana students and faculty will be on display in the University Center gallery until Nov. 15.

The silk screen prints in the show are the result of stencils cut by a photographic method. The resulting image looks like a drawing and a photograph combined. These prints also incorporate the psychedelic effects of "color vibration" depending on special light sources and visual neutralizing of lines.

The realistic photos include nude studies relying on the abstract visual form rather than on the recognizable female figure.

Present and former UM students and faculty exhibitors participating in the show include John R. Stocking, an assistant professor of art at UM; and Reid W. Schoonover, Kaukauna, Wis.; James Rice, Medford, Ore.; Peter Yegen IV, W. Derry King and Deborah Anne Ekland, Billings.

The UM Art Club and the Program Council of the Associated Students at UM are sponsors of the display, which is open to the public without charge.

Next show will be a display of works by Bruce Barton, chairman of the UM art department, Nov. 16 to Dec. 15.
